WHAT ARE COOKIES?

Cookies are small text files which are downloaded to your computer or mobile device when you visit a website. When you return to a previously visited website – or visit a website that uses the same cookies – that website will recognise these cookies and therefore your device.

Cookies perform essential functions, like letting you navigate between pages efficiently, remembering your site preferences and generally improving your browsing experience.

TYPES OF COOKIES

First-party cookies

These cookies are set by and belong to the website you are visiting. In our case this will be masterinvestor.co.uk and we may set these cookies when you visit in order that we can recognise you when you return.

Third-party cookies

These cookies are set by and belong to someone other than the owner of the website you are visiting. For example, some BEES web pages may also contain content from other sites such as YouTube, which may set their own cookies. Also, if you share a link to a BEES web page, the service you share it on (for example, Facebook) may set a cookie on your browser. We have no control over third-party cookies – you can turn them off, but not through us.

Session cookies

These cookies are set at the start of a visit and only last as long as your visit. They are usually deleted automatically when you close your browser.

Persistent cookies

These cookies are set during a first visit to a site but will carry an expiry date or time. They will remain on your device until either you clear your cookies or the expiry is reached. They can be used for analytical purposes to track visits over time, for example we could see how many people visited a particular page and then came back to view it again later.

Strictly necessary cookies

These cookies are essential, as they enable you to move around a website and use its features. Without them, services that you've asked for can't be provided. These cookies don't gather information about you that could be used for marketing or remembering where you've been on the internet.

Functional cookies

These cookies allow a website to remember your preferences and settings. For example, they can be used to remember certain log-in details, changes you've made to text size and font, and provide services that you've asked for such as commenting on a blog.

Performance cookies

These cookies collect information about how you use a website, for example which pages you go to most often and if you get error messages from certain pages. The information these cookies collect is only used to improve how a website works. These cookies are not used to target you with online advertising. You can switch them off but without these cookies we can't learn how our website is performing and make relevant improvements to enhance your browsing experience.

Targeting cookies

These cookies gather information about your browsing habits. They remember that you've visited a particular website and share this information with other organisations such as advertisers, to help show you ads that are more relevant to you and your interests. Although these cookies can track your visits to other websites, they don't usually know who you are. Without them, advertisements that you see online will be less relevant to you and your interests.

HOW TO CHANGE YOUR COOKIE SETTINGS

Most web browsers allow some control of most cookies through the browser settings.

The instructions for these vary from browser to browser and they may change from time to time as new versions are released.

Here are some links to instructions for the most common browsers. If your browser is not listed below, please visit All About Cookies or <http://www.youronlinechoices.eu/> where you may find more information about your specific browser, or select the “Help” menu in your browser.
